

Accessibility of Pickwick Arms

More trains a day go to Greenwich—which is another name for Pickwick Arms—than you can shake a stick at. Or you can make it by motor in an hour. But the point is, the hotel will be itally There when you arrive. So many country hotels are not. Pickwick is! Everything about it, from the solid masonry of its Tudor architecture, to the luxury of its Fifth Avenue interiors, is a welcome relief from the tradition of country hotels. So is the food! So is the attendance! And don't forget, that it's in the center of a flock of the greatest golf courses in the world!

We'll give you a great week-end if you'll come!

Referee Fails to Make Much
Progress in Tracing Funds in $300,000 Failure.

GIRL GOT $1,000 CHECK

Mystery of 'D. D.' Account Unsolved and Fallon Case Is Still Hazy.

Keyes Winter, trustee in the $300,000 bankruptcy of Dillon & Co., stock brokers alleged to be backed by "Dandy Phil" Kastel, received information yesterday showing that the Dillon concern, which already had taken over many of the Charles A. Stoneham accounts, anticipated the failure of Dier & Co. and began raiding the accounts of that concern while it was yet under the style of Hughes & Dier.

Not only did customers' men of Dillon & Co. have information leading them to believe that all was not well with Hughes & Dier, but actually used it to persuade customers of the late concern to transfer their accounts to Dillon. It appeared from Mr. Winter's informant that this raid on the Hughes & Dier accounts met with fairly easy success immediately after the New York Stock Exchange ripped out the Hughes & Dier tickers.

Some customers thus taken from Hughes & Dier, it is known, formerly had their accounts with Stoneham and had transferred their accounts to Hughes & Dier at Stoneham's request.

Customer Hears of Failure.
At least one customer was not aware that he had jumped from the frying pan into the fire until a month after Dillon & Co. had failed, when he made a personal trip to the Dillon offices to learn why an order he had given apparently had not been executed. There he was informed by the elevator starter that a receiver was in charge, and Dillon & Co. had had no offices for a month.

Mr. Winter examined witnesses yesterday before Referee Peter B. Olney, Jr., in an effort to determine what became of the money the Dillon customers paid in. The examination was productive of references to Kastel, William J. Fallon and Eugene F. McGee, lawyers, but the trustee was able to learn only that Doris Sheerin, a motion picture actress, who had been mentioned in previous testimony, received $1,000.

Concerning Doris Sheerin, Augustus Toohill, indicted customers' man of Dillon & Co., testified last week:
Q. Do you recall visiting his ("Dandy Phil") Kastel's apartment at 489 Seventh avenue? A. Yes.
Q. You went up to Kastel's and this girl, Doris Sheerin, was in the room?
A. Yes.
Q. Who is this Miss Sheerin? A. Miss Sheerin, I believe is a stage name.
Q. Yes? A. I always knew her as Doris Kastel.
Q. Is she Kastel's wife? A. I think she is.
Q. Did you ever hear of a girl named Maude Edna Kastel? A. Never did.
Q. You never heard of her? How

Packers Tip Housewives: Buy Smoked Hams Now

Special Dispatch to THE NEW YORK HERALD.
New York Herald Bureau.
Washington, D. C., Sept. 5.

AMERICAN housewives are missing good bargains by not buying smoked hams and heavy pork loins now, according to a statement by the Institute of American Meat Packers. Smoked hams, they say, have declined 25 per cent. since June and are 20 per cent. lower than this time last year, while heavy pork loins are 10 cents cheaper than light pork loins.

The packers' institute says that the housewives should take the heavy pork loins in preference to the light ones. Chops from the heavy loins, they say, are every bit as nutritious and palatable as chops from the light loins, but seem to be disregarded by many housewives, who evidently prefer more chops to the pound rather than more meat to the dollar.

long had Miss Doris Sheerin been known as Kastel's wife? A. To me, ever since I met her.
Q. What did you do after your return from Indianapolis—at Kastel's? A. At the time you speak of, I could not say. I used to go there two or three times a week.
Q. Just to see Doris Sheerin—Doris Kastel? A. I would go up there and then would bring friends up there.
Q. Just to see Doris Kastel? A. That's right; go up to the house whether he was there or if he wasn't.

That Miss Sheerin received a check from Dillon & Co. for $1,000 was established through the testimony of Miss Betty Thierstone, of Hackensack, N. J., and James B. Suppin, assistant treasurer of the Mercer Trust Company, of Trenton.

Mr. Winter found also that $45,252.05 went out through a mysterious "D. D. No. 2" account in the six months immediately preceding the bankruptcy. Although the initials, D. D., correspond to the name of Daniel Dillon, who was head of the concern, Mr. Winter said he felt certain that it was a dummy account for some other person. He explained that he had been unable to find that Dillon got more than $8,000.

"D. D." Account Mysterious.
Mr. Winter asked Miss Thierstone, "D. D. No. 2" was not an account of Kastel's. She replied that she did not know.

Mr. Winter also attempted to establish that a $2,000 was that of William J. Fallon. Miss Thierstone said that she did not know whether it was Mr. Fallon's or not. Mr. Winter stated that while the name of Mr. Fallon did not appear on the Dillon books his name did appear frequently on the firm's "blotter," and in one instance it had been scratched out after being entered opposite an amount. Miss Thierstone, however, identified many checks payable to Mr. Fallon.

Mr. Winter said after the hearing that Toohill has informed him that he has retained both Fallon and McGee to defend him against the grand jury charge upon which he faces trial in Montgomery county in connection with his activities while with Dillon & Co.

DIER WINS POSTPONEMENT.

Judge Johnstone Will Announce Trial Date To-morrow.
Judge Robert S. Johnstone, in General Sessions, granted the request yesterday of William M. K. Olcott, counsel for Elmore D. Dier, Harry J. Lawrence and Adam Recklebs, indicted for grand larceny in connection with the bankruptcy of E. D. Dier & Co., that the date for fixing trial date be postponed. Judge Johnstone announced that he will decide to-morrow upon the trial date.

MRS. TIERNAN TO BE POULIN'S ACCUSER

Baby Parentage Case in South Bend, Ind., Takes on New Phase.

Special Dispatch to THE NEW YORK HERALD.

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Sept. 5.—Contrary to expectations the preliminary hearing of Harry Poulin, charged with the parentage of William Tiernan, aged nine months, did not come up in court this afternoon. The hearing was postponed until 10 o'clock Thursday morning.

Prof. Tiernan was not in court, being with his wife, who for the first time in several days was able to leave her bed. Accompanied by the educator she took a short walk in the vicinity of her home during the afternoon. An event of importance to-day was the addition to Poulin's legal talent of Samuel Parker, one of the best known attorneys in northern Indiana. He, with former Prosecutor Samuel P. Schwartz and Vilus G. Jones, will defend Poulin.

A new phase in the case developed when it became known that Prof. Tiernan was not the accused in the case, the affidavit against Poulin having been signed by Mrs. Tiernan.

"It has been intimated that Mr. Poulin will present a defense," said Mr. Parker. "We and the public are anxiously awaiting it. I believe I can tell the public in advance what that defense will be. A foundation of lies with a superstructure of the blackmail charges, the last cry of the man, the last refuge he is able to take. We have him cornered and we know it. His attitude has been nothing more than denial after denial."

"Let Poulin not evade the issue. It is solely an issue between him and Mrs. Tiernan. The case, I know, is without precedent in the criminal law. It is the first quadrangular case ever presented for the decision of a court and the judgment of society. The name of a beautiful and innocent little child, and far as his father is concerned, a homeless outcast, which is the basis of this quadrangle."

"We will establish our case and I believe we can rely on the testimony of Mrs. Tiernan exclusively."

LIQUOR IN RED HOOK TAKES 4 MORE LIVES

"Take this and buy yourself another drink. It'll buck you up," Keenan glanced suspiciously at the policeman, took the money and went out of the house. He went directly to the Vitali grocery store, handed the dollar to the clerk, and was given in return a full half pint bottle of whisky. Neary nabbed him on the way out, took the bottle from him and then notified the Hamilton avenue station.

Half a dozen detectives, a police sergeant and several patrolmen swooped down on the place, arrested the woman and her clerk and then searched the premises. The Vitalis live on the second floor. Ciro Laura, a bicycle shop proprietor, lives a short distance down the hall. In the various rooms they found seven five-gallon cans of whisky, three demijohns, eleven quart bottles, a twenty-gallon keg of whisky, a box of labels; and in Laura's room they came upon a loaded shotgun. He was arrested.

Mrs. Vitali and Caffero were questioned by District Attorney Ruston.

Clerk Admits Sales.

Caffero admitted he had sold Keenan three half pint bottles of whisky on three successive nights, but said he did not know the quality of the liquor and had simply been acting on instructions from Mrs. Vitali. He said he had seen Mrs. Martin and Keenan go into 147 Conover street on several occasions.

His remark that "the stuff is being sold all along the line" led the police to search all houses in the district, but beyond empty bottles nothing incriminating was found. Determined to stamp out drinking in the section, squads of detectives went to all known night resorts last night and broke up several gatherings. Seven arrests for disorderly conduct and intoxication were made at a cellar at 13 Cole street owned by Thomas Olsen, where the detectives found a hilarious gathering.

The liquor that was seized in the restaurant of Mrs. Jennie Johnson at 199 Conover street Monday night has been analyzed and found to be harmless. Mrs. Johnson was arraigned yesterday and held in $500 bail for violation of the Mullen-Gage act.

200 CASES GONE, BIG RUM PLOT DISCOVERED

Warehouse Here Is Object of Bootleg Gang.

Prohibition agents on the staff of John S. Parsons, chief enforcement officer, are investigating a plot to withdraw a large quantity of bonded liquor from an Eleventh avenue warehouse through forged withdrawal permits.

Two hundred cases have already been taken out and distributed through unknown channels. Agents Gruenwald, Saver, Fannely and Fassullo came into possession of the permits which purported to be signed by J. T. Davis, prohibition director of Philadelphia, but which were actually made out on cleverly counterfeited paper and vided with forged signatures.

Both shipments were ostensibly consigned to business firms in Philadelphia. Verification papers from the Philadelphia office were also forged.

More Indictments Forecast in the Herrin Affair.

MARION, Ill., Sept. 5 (Associated Press).—Indictments charging several Grand Jury witnesses with perjury were forecast by Attorney-General Edward J. Brundage at the close of today's session of the Special Grand Jury delving into the facts and circumstances of the Herrin massacre of June 22.

BETTER OUTLOOK FOR MEAT.

The outlook for the meat trade seems to be more favorable. According to the Institute of American Meat Packers in its review for the month just ended the demand for beef from industrial centers has increased, domestic trade in lard and fresh pork kept up in fair volume and country buyers of sheep and lambs were active, especially toward the end of the month.
